

ABSTRACT

A computer controlled digital electronic display system for disseminating targeted public advertising, at select times and in select locations, in combination with a system for providing publicly available Internet access. It is designed to provide wireless connectivity between portable consumer electronics and the Internet. Also described is a business method for the placement of revenue generating Internet services including wireless based transactions, funded essentially by advertising revenue.

200220-0855001